MICHAEL WALKER – A useful bat, has some strong forcing shots. As a bowler he should concentrate on one type of bowling in a match. The difference in speed between his 'slows' and 'fasts' is too marked.

GEORGE ROBINSON – Has some good shots – especially on the off. His on shots are not too strong. Has had little luck this season, being out in an unfortunate fashion in three or four innings.

HAROLD BAILEY – Although a useful spin bowler in that he can keep the batsman guessing for three or four overs, he cannot frequently beat the bat and take wickets. Has played several steady innings but is inclined to hang his bat out at balls on the off.

LESLIE WILSON- Although he stands up well to some awkward balls and few get past, he does not take the ball cleanly enough to get wickets – either stumped or caught. A natural hitter with a strong pull even from well on the off deliveries.

CECIL EDMUND PERRY. – Has only played after the first four games but is remarkably steady and effective. Definite promise of batsmanship which he should try to develop. Strongest on the off.

DONALD McALLISTER – A medium fast change bowler. There has not been occasion to use him for any length yet. Should try to curb his natural desire to hit EVERYTHING out of sight and then he will begin to get bigger scores.

HALL H. – Left hand bowler with a natural swerve and break. Has been very successful and if he fulfils his early promise will become a very good bowler. When batting should stand up to leg balls more and use his feet not only quickly but cleverly.

NEIL BUTTERWOOD – A useful bowler who makes use of his height. Has shown that he can defend, but he is also desirous of emulating Jim Smith. Must concentrate more on strikes. Safe in the field.

MILLARD L. – A fastish bowler who generally keeps a good length. Inclined to slash too often when batting.

CHARLES HELLEWELL – Should turn into a good batsman with constant practice and coaching but should watch the ball more carefully. A useful bowler.

RONALD GLEAVE – A very efficient Captain. Has bowled excellently in the last few matches. Sometimes sends short balls. His batting shows considerable improvement on last year's and is now a reliable batsman.
